For the purpose of this study, the following criteria were used to select the articles: (1) the article must be a primary research article; (2) the article must be published in a peer-reviewed journal; (3) the article must be published in English; (4) the article must be published in the last 10 years (2004-2014); (5) the article must be available in full text; and (6) the article must be relevant to the study.

There are also several other factors that can affect the results of a study. For example, the way the data are collected and analyzed can have a significant impact on the results. Therefore, it is important to be aware of these factors when interpreting the results of a study.

the 1990s, the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) have been working to improve the health of the nation's children. One of the key areas of focus has been the prevention of childhood obesity. In 1991, HHS and CDC launched the National Childhood Obesity Prevention Strategy, which was the first federal effort to address childhood obesity. The strategy was based on the understanding that childhood obesity is a major public health problem and a leading cause of death and disability in the United States. The strategy was designed to be a comprehensive, multi-sectoral effort to prevent childhood obesity by addressing the environmental and behavioral factors that contribute to the problem. The strategy was organized into four main areas of focus: (1) increasing physical activity, (2) improving nutrition, (3) creating supportive environments, and (4) strengthening community coalitions. The strategy was implemented through a variety of programs and initiatives, including the National Physical Activity and Fitness Program, the National Nutrition Program, the National Environmental Health Program, and the National Community Coalitions Program. The strategy was a landmark effort in the history of childhood obesity prevention, and it laid the foundation for the current efforts to address this public health problem.

It is important to note that the study is limited in scope. It only looks at the first 100 cases of the disease, which may not be representative of the entire population. The study also does not take into account the possibility of other factors, such as age and gender, which may influence the results. Finally, the study is based on a single source of data, which may introduce bias.

Small-scale, family-run businesses are the backbone of the economy in many developing countries. They provide employment for millions of people and are a source of income for many of the world's poor. However, these businesses often face significant challenges, such as limited access to credit, lack of legal protection, and poor infrastructure. This article explores the challenges faced by small-scale businesses in developing countries and discusses potential solutions to improve their performance and sustainability.

For the past few years, the company has been working on a number of projects to improve its financial performance. One of the key initiatives has been to reduce costs across the organization. This has been achieved through a combination of measures, including streamlining operations, improving efficiency, and negotiating better terms with suppliers. As a result, the company has been able to significantly reduce its operating expenses, which has helped to improve its overall profitability. In addition, the company has also focused on increasing its revenue. This has been done through a variety of means, including expanding its product offerings, entering new markets, and improving its sales and marketing efforts. These efforts have resulted in a steady increase in the company's revenue over the past few years. Overall, the company's focus on cost reduction and revenue growth has been a key factor in its improved financial performance.

Power, wealth sharing on gov't, MILF agenda

By Phil C. Solares

THE GOVERNMENT AND THE MILF both have similar agendas when it comes to power sharing and wealth sharing. The primary goal of both groups is to ensure that the people have access to the resources of the country, and that the government is able to provide the services that the people need. The MILF, on the other hand, is focused on the issue of self-determination for the people of Mindanao. The MILF's agenda is to ensure that the people of Mindanao have the right to self-determination, and that the government is able to provide the services that the people need.

Both groups are focused on the issue of power sharing and wealth sharing. The first thing I noticed when I stepped out of the plane was the humidity. It was a warm blanket, a familiar embrace. I had heard that the Philippines was a tropical paradise, and now I was experiencing it firsthand. The air was thick with the scent of tropical flowers and the sound of distant drums. I felt like I had entered a new world, one that was both familiar and strange at the same time.

The people were friendly, their smiles as wide as the sky. They welcomed me with open arms, showing me the best of their country. I was in luck, for I had heard that the Philippines was a beautiful land, and now I was seeing it for myself. The beaches were pristine, the water was crystal clear, and the food was delicious. I was in for a great time.

As I walked along the beach, I saw many people playing in the sand. They were laughing and playing, their faces lit up with joy. I felt like I had found a new home, a place where I could relax and enjoy life. The Philippines was indeed a beautiful land, and I was lucky to have found it.

In digital age, branding becomes indispensable

By [Name] | 1000 Words

Social media can help make or break a company's reputation

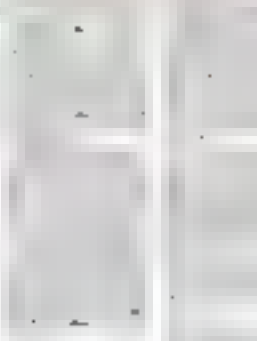

MANILA — In the digital age, branding has become indispensable for businesses. It is no longer just a logo or a tagline, but a comprehensive strategy that encompasses every aspect of a company's identity. From the way a company communicates to its customers to the way it interacts with its employees, branding is everywhere. It is the foundation upon which a company's reputation is built, and it is the key to its success in the marketplace.

BA 100

Branding is not just a one-time exercise, but a continuous process. It requires a deep understanding of the company's values, mission, and vision, and a commitment to consistency across all touchpoints. In the digital age, where information is spread so quickly, a single misinterpreted tweet or a viral video can damage a company's reputation in a matter of hours. Therefore, businesses must be vigilant in monitoring their online presence and responding promptly to any negative feedback.

Moreover, branding is also a powerful tool for differentiation. In a crowded market, a strong brand identity can help a company stand out from its competitors and attract loyal customers. It is the unique personality of a company that resonates with its target audience and creates a lasting impression.

Finally, branding is also a key driver of business growth. A strong brand identity can help a company expand into new markets and attract new investors. It is the foundation upon which a company's future success is built, and it is the key to its long-term sustainability.

Bringing in the marketing orientation to our sales-driven company

Cautioning up SMEs for export offensive

MANILA — The Philippines' small and medium enterprises (SMEs) are often sales-driven, focusing on the immediate needs of their customers. However, in the long run, this approach can be detrimental to their growth and sustainability. To thrive in the competitive global market, SMEs must adopt a marketing orientation, which involves understanding the needs and desires of their target audience and creating a value proposition that resonates with them. This requires a shift in mindset, from a focus on selling to a focus on building a strong brand identity and a loyal customer base.

BA 100

Moreover, SMEs must also be cautious in their export offensive. While expanding into international markets can be a great way to grow, it also comes with its own set of challenges. SMEs must understand the cultural differences and business practices of their target markets, and they must be prepared to adapt their products and services to meet the needs of these markets. It is also important for SMEs to build strong relationships with local partners and distributors, as this can help them navigate the complexities of the international market.

Finally, SMEs must also be aware of the importance of branding in the digital age. As mentioned earlier, branding is no longer just a logo or a tagline, but a comprehensive strategy that encompasses every aspect of a company's identity. SMEs must invest in branding, as this will help them stand out from their competitors and attract loyal customers. They must also be vigilant in monitoring their online presence and responding promptly to any negative feedback.
